

GovDeals to Coordinate Surplus Real Estate Sales for Arkansas Game and Fish Commission

July 21, 2026

Online auctions will expand access to surplus real estate opportunities across the state

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 21, 2026 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- The Arkansas Game and Fish Commission has partnered with GovDeals, the leading online marketplace for government agencies to sell real estate and other surplus assets, to bring its surplus real estate sales online for the first time.

Through this new approach, the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission will list surplus real estate auctions on GovDeals, making it easier for interested buyers across the state and beyond to discover available properties and participate in the bidding process.

By moving these sales to an online platform, the Commission is increasing visibility for surplus properties and creating a more accessible experience for the public. The GovDeals platform lets users browse listings, review property details, view photos, make settlement arrangements and place bids from anywhere, removing many barriers associated with traditional in-person auctions.

"Moving surplus real estate sales online lets us reach a wide audience and make these opportunities easy for the public to access," said Stephen Roach, Real Estate Manager for the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission. "GovDeals provides a clear, streamlined process for buyers to learn about available properties and participate in the auction process with confidence."

Proceeds from real estate sales will be earmarked for future land purchases, with an emphasis on expanding AGFC-owned properties and eliminating inholdings within these areas.

Interested buyers can explore current and upcoming Arkansas Game and Fish Commission listings through the agency's GovDeals seller page, where new properties will be added as they become available.

To participate in an auction, users must first create an account and complete the free registration form.

About GovDeals
